In practice, it means that cities can choose their energy suppliers on the basis of cost, pollution, and local economic benefits, without having to own and maintain the electric grid. If we, promoters of Sharing Cities, do not manage to address the tension of gentrification by finding strategies to secure the livelihoods of the people who produce the urban commons and to disarm profit-maximizing interests, then the tragedy of the urban commons will only be reinforced.

The common issues of these types are: fenced off of small squares, parks and spa
Grundtyp 3-Zimmer-Wohnung 3. The balcony slabs and party walls oscillate and the impression of mobility is emphasised by the flowing curves of the balustrades. In the case of historical projects old photos provide a picture of the situation shortly after an estate was completed or during the early years of its use.

The program enables these families, often displaced from rural areas, to access seed saving and seed libraries are on the rise as communities deepen their commitment to healthy, delicious, local food.
