If you think that a person is too still and stiff, with almost mechanical movements, they might be lying. Lying is part of human nature, and there is no single, universal method that you can use to detect when someone is lying to you. Effective Strategies. One common area where this occurs is in with respect to lying. Unless there is some magical mute button on the bathroom faucet, you know the sink was never touched – and neither was their toothbrush. But let me be clear – you cannot plan to spend a year writing handwritten thank you notes and think referrals are just going to flow in. Even if we store our memories, remembering everything is not as easy. However, if someone has plans to lie to you, they will craft a story. After a moment, they might realize that they did not show the emotion supposed to go hand in hand with the verbal answer, which will result in a slight delay between giving the verbal response and showing any definitive emotions.
