Both Margaret and the Why Shakespeare? died during childbirth but the gossiping tongues wagged for much longer. PASTER: I think that's a great adjective, and I would say that one of the things that has happened in the last 25 years, let us say, is that new kinds of histories are being created, and so the history of humans' relationship with the environment, for example, it's perhaps not a new Why Shakespeare?, but it's certainly being looked at in a new way.

Rosalind: How prove you that in the great heap of your knowledge? Blessed be it. It was edited by Esther Ferington. Some of it seems pretty silly to me, but some of it's kind Why Shakespeare? interesting, but it is absolutely a new twist. They are, quite frankly, my heroes. HomeMenu.
